Five Kids and the Fate of the Universe New Book Series Launches for Young Adults

Newtown, PA (February 2, 2004) — Sneak Force, a new book series for young adults, has just hit the book publishing market. The first installment of the series, Sneak Force: Mission 1, The Legend by Lynne N. Thomas, is available worldwide at major online bookstores through publisher Llumina Press.

Sneak Force tells the story of five sneaky, video game-playing kids and their time-traveling missions to save their world. In the year 2408, the Alliance is battling for survival against the Volaquars, who have all but defeated them. All hope is lost until five sneaky kids and their video gaming skills come to the rescue. Kids? Yes! The Alliance's ships and equipment are all controlled like video games, and in the dire situation they were facing, they finally tested kids at the controls. Kids are the best at video games —and therefore, the best pilots.

The Volaquars have figured out that if they can alter important events in our history, they can change the world in 2408, giving them the upper hand to take over the Alliance. The Alliance calls upon the Sneak Force, five kids ready to owe some sneaks. Kidd, Edge, Beat, Flare, and Sketch travel back in time to stop the Volaquars from destroying our past events to secure our future.
